

For Immediate Release: Statement by Rahe-Wanitanama on Dolphin Head 2024 Dry Season Storytelling Tour

March 13, 2024

Askenish, Hanover, Jamaica – In our ongoing journey to share the rich tapestry of tales from my grandmother's book, we've encountered both challenges and new opportunities. Originally, we sought to bring this project to life through a Kickstarter campaign, aiming to fund a storefront and additional storytelling tour dates in my native village of Askenish. However, integrity and security are paramount to us, and upon noticing unusual activity that compromised these values, we made the difficult decision to cancel the campaign.

This setback has not deterred our spirit or our mission. Instead, it has led us to a promising new path. We are excited to announce that the pre-sale of my grandmother's book will now be available on Amazon, a platform that ensures the security and accessibility we strive for. Shipping will commence in September 2024, marking the beginning of this book's journey into the hearts and homes of readers. For those who have already supported us thus far, your faith in this project means the world to us. We invite you to continue this journey with us by pre-ordering the book on Amazon and joining us at our storytelling events.

As for our cherished storytelling tour, a tradition that annually brings our community together, we're embarking on an exciting new chapter this year. Through the Dolphin Head Story Bridge initiative, we've already gathered and planned stories specifically from Kingsvale, underscoring our commitment to this village. Our mission extends beyond storytelling; we aim to weave a tapestry of shared experiences and histories.

This year, our ambition is to stretch our hospitality even further, warmly welcoming our elders and bridging villages within the Hanover province. While Kingsvale remains a focal point for our storytelling endeavors, we're eager to incorporate new narratives from Askenish. This strategic inclusion enriches our storytelling tour, fostering a deeper sense of community and connection between these villages.

The storytelling tour is more than just an event; it's a movement towards uniting our communities through the power of storytelling. By highlighting stories from both Kingsvale and Askenish, we aim to celebrate our collective heritage, ensuring that every voice is heard and every tale cherished. This approach not only enhances our storytelling tour but also strengthens the bonds between our communities, making it a true testament to the power of stories in bringing people together.

For more updates on the book and our upcoming storytelling tour, please subscribe to our newsletter at the bottom of our contact page. Your engagement and support fuel our mission, and we are deeply grateful for the opportunity to share our stories with you.

For more information, please contact: mabrika@rahe-wanitanama.com